Although lots of animals stick to their own kind, sometimes two very different animals will help each other out.

Sea anemone

Sea anemone tentacles can cause a painful sting. But clownfish aren't affected by it. The clownfish keep the anemone clean, and the anemone keeps the clownfish safe.

Clownfish

When aphids suck sap from plants, they produce something called honey dew. Ants love honey dew so much that they protect the aphids.

Remoras are fish with suckers on their heads that stick to sharks. The sharks get cleaned, and the remora gets to eat any food left by the sharks.
