

Months later

The animal wakes up in the spring, when it's much warmer and there's more food.

Spring has sprung!

Some birds fly to warmer places instead of hibernating.

A summer's sleep

Some desert animals, such as desert frogs, insects, and snails, sleep most of summer – when it gets too hot for them.

Many bears sleep for most of the winter, but they can wake up quickly, so it's not a true hibernation.
