

Monarch butterfly

Start: Canada

End: Mexico

Some monarch butterflies fly south along the coast of North America to escape the cold. Once they arrive at the end of their journey they lay their eggs and their babies fly back again.

Humpback whale

Start: Arctic waters

End: Tropical waters

Humpback whales travel thousands of miles a year. In the summer they go to cold waters where there's lots of food. Then in the winter, they swim to warm waters to have their babies.
