

Poison

Some animals need to be touched or swallowed to transfer harmful substances to others.

Predators are less likely to eat poisonous animals.

The golden poison frog is only the size of a paper clip, but it's one of the most poisonous animals in the world!

Animals don't eat me because they'll get sick.

Viceroy butterfly

Faking it

There are animals that trick predators into thinking they're poisonous. The viceroy butterfly looks like the poisonous monarch, so predators leave it alone.

Monarch butterfly

Not many birds are poisonous, but the hooded pitohui bird's skin and feathers are covered in a strong toxin.

The rough-skinned newt's bumpy skin produces toxins.
