

Super soarers

It's hard work flapping your wings all day! That's why some birds spread their wings to glide and soar, letting warm air currents do the work.

Short-tailed hawk

Albatross

I belong to a group of birds called gulls. We're seabirds, and we're expert gliders.

Kittiwake

Tawny eagle