

A little lift

Soaring birds rely on warm air to stay in the sky, rather than flapping their wings. They spread their wings and the rising warm air lifts them up.

Andean condor

Bridled tern

Stork

Indian vulture

Ravens

Ravens flap their wings less and glide more than most small birds.