

Suit of scales

Is that a walking pine cone or a spiky anteater?

No, it's a super-scaly pangolin! It's the only mammal in the world with scales.

A baby pangolin clings to its mother's tail until it is strong enough to walk on its own.

When pangolins are born, their scales are soft. They harden up over time.

A pangolin's tongue can be longer than its body.
