

The children grew up to the rhythms of farm life—plowing, planting, and harvesting. As a boy, Leonardo would have learned how to look after farm animals and about olives, the most important local crop. Olives were a popular food and the oil that came from pressing them was used for cooking. Olive oil had other uses too, such as keeping machines running smoothly and being burned as a fuel in lamps.

Olives