

Raised ridges

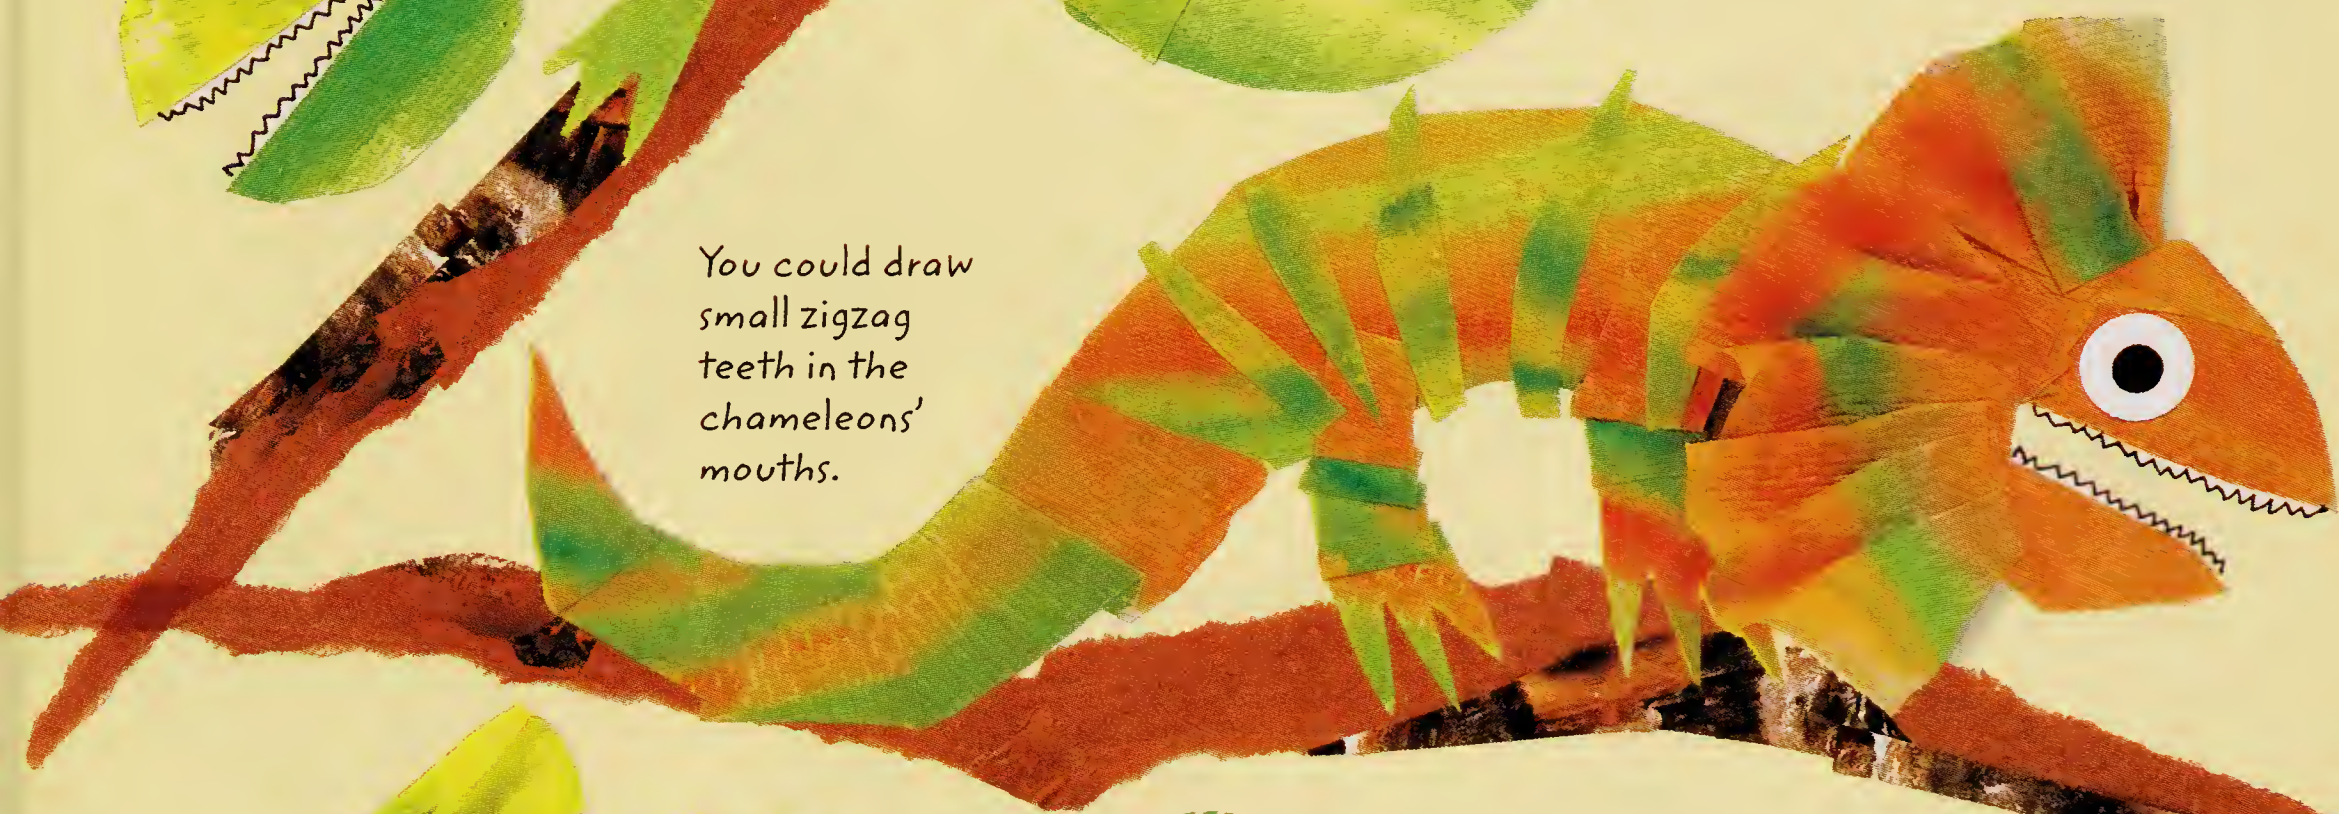

Spread glue on some tissue paper and roll it up tightly. When the glue is dry, cut it into shorter pieces and glue them onto the body.

You could draw small zigzag teeth in the chameleons' mouths.

Branches

Rip strips of brown paper and glue them together to make a branch. Dab glue on one end of a paper leaf, then fold it over to make it 3-D.

Frilled back

Cut a strip of painted paper towel and glue it along one edge. Press it along the chameleon's back, folding it as you go.
