

Reptiles of the world

Alligator

Alligators live in the swamps of the south eastern US. When resting, they open their mouths to cool down.

There are more than 6,000 different kinds of reptiles, and most of them live where it is warm. Some live in water, but many more prefer to stay on dry land.

European grass snake

To escape its enemies, this snake lies upside down and pretends to be dead.

Soft-shelled turtle

This turtle lives in North America. It is usually found buried in mud in rivers and ponds.

Cobra

This cobra has a poisonous bite that can kill in minutes. It lives in Asia.

Tegu lizard

This South American lizard has a tough skin made from horny scales.

Pricklenape agama

The agama lives in northern African deserts. When food is scarce, it survives on fat in its tail.

Crested water dragon

This lizard lives in Asia and can run faster on two legs than it can on four.

Did you know?

When it's attacked, a horned toad squirts blood from its eyes to shock its enemies.

Chameleon

Chameleons live in African rain forests. They can use their amazing eyes to look in two directions at once!

Frilled lizard

Found in the dry bushlands of Australia, this lizard puts up its frill to frighten off enemies.

