

South America: culture

Did you know ?

Panama hats are made from palm tree leaves that grow in Ecuador.

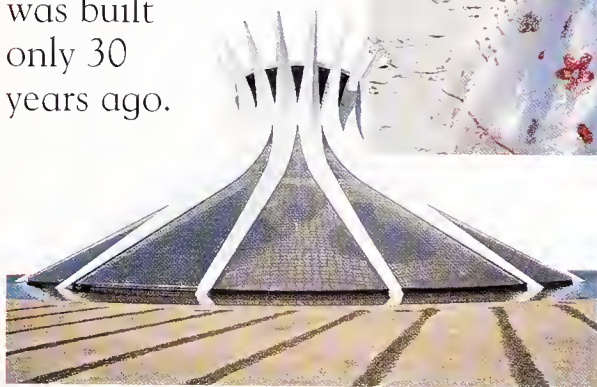

Carnival, Brazil

Traditional festivals are still important today. Colorful dancers sway to modern music in this Brazilian carnival.

Brasilia

This cathedral lies in Brasilia, Brazil's capital city, which was built only 30 years ago.

The people of Central and South America enjoy both modern and traditional lifestyles. There is a great variety of culture and customs.

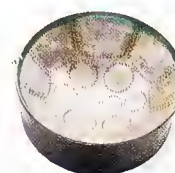

Elaborate headdress

Brightly colored costume

Music

Music is very important to all South American cultures.

Steel drum

Guiro

Culture

Arts and crafts, such as jewelry making, still follow traditional methods.

Cricket is the most popular sport on the Caribbean Islands.

Food, like Italian pasta, has been introduced from other countries.

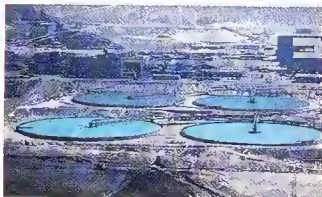

Ancient ruins of long-ago cities lie hidden in the forests of Central America.

Christ the Redeemer

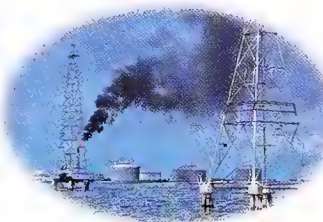

This statue stands high above Rio de Janeiro in Brazil.

Industry

Copper mines in Chile are some of the largest in the world.

Steel works in Brazil produce the metal used to make cars.

Oil has made Venezuela the richest country in South America.

Tourism is an important industry in South America. Many people flock to beaches there.

