

Mammals of the world

Reindeer

Reindeer live in snowy northern wastelands. Some are kept for meat and leather.

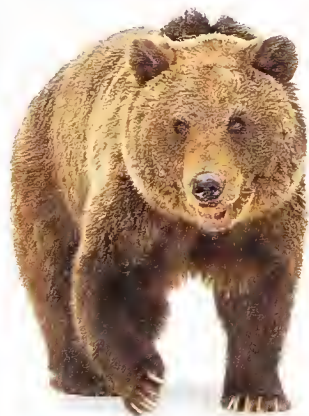

Otter

Otters are expert divers and live and feed in the rivers of North America.

Porcupine

Porcupines live in North America. They raise their sharp quills to protect themselves.

Brown bear

The European bear climbs trees to raid bees' nests for their honey.

Mountain goat

These goats are very surefooted. They live on mountain slopes in North America.

Rhinoceros

Rhinos are found in Africa and Asia. They use their fierce-looking horns to defend themselves.

Bat

Bats are the only mammals that can fly. They live in large groups in caves all over the world.

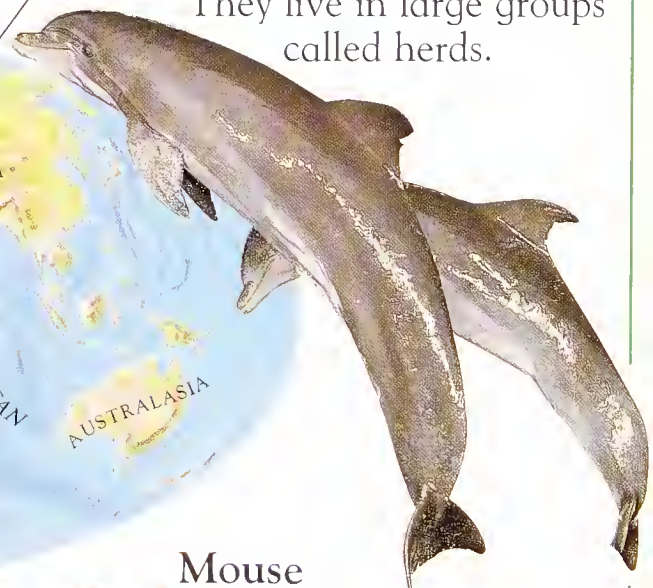

Bush baby

Bush babies have huge eyes. They hunt at night among the trees of African rain forests.

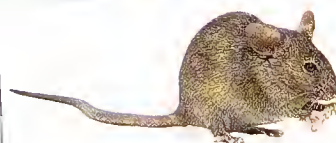

Dolphin

Dolphins are found in all the oceans of the world. They live in large groups called herds.

Mouse

Mice are found all over the world. They often live in people's homes, eating crumbs.

Zebra

Zebras live on the grassy plains of Africa. Their stripes help camouflage them in a group.

Did you know?

When they are attacked, skunks spray a horrible-smelling liquid at their enemy, then run away.
