

Trucks

Types of trucks

Tankers carry liquid goods, such as oil, gasoline, or milk, around the country.

Street sweepers collect garbage from the streets and keep our towns clean.

Moving vans carry the furniture when people are moving to a new house.

Car carriers carry new cars from a factory to the showroom.

Snowplows have a large shovel at the front to clear snow from roads.

Semitrailer

This truck has two main parts – the cab at the front and the trailer at the back.

Engine under driver's cab

Jointed section makes it possible to turn corners.

Storage space for goods

Thick, strong tires

Exhaust

Diesel fumes from the engine come out through the smokestack.

Wheels

Trucks have lots of wheels to support their heavy loads.

Inside a cab

Many large trucks have a bed in the cab so the driver can rest on long trips.

Did you know?

The very first trucks were steam powered. Coal was shoveled into a boiler as the truck moved along!

Emergency trucks

Ambulances take people who are sick or hurt to the hospital.

Tow trucks take vehicles to a garage for repairs.

Fire engines carry firefighters, water pumps, and hoses to the scene of a fire.
