

What's moving?

The best way to observe a forest canopy is to lie down and look up. You might see squirrels high up in the trees, or even raccoons in a North American forest. In the rain forest, you may be lucky enough to spot a bright-red macaw.

Autumn harvest

In the fall, animals gather food to store for the winter. Some birds, such as the acorn woodpecker, drill holes in tree trunks to store acorns. Fewer leaves mean animals are easier to see, so look up to enjoy more than just the changing leaf colors.

NAME THAT BIRD

See how many different birds you can spot in the canopy. The best time to hear and see them is at dawn in spring, when males sing to attract females.
