

GEORGE WASHINGTON CARVER

American agricultural chemist, agronomist, and inventor • 1860s–1943

George Washington Carver was born into slavery. This means that his family members were treated as if they were the property of the farm where they lived. They were forced to work for no pay and were not free to leave.

Slavery was abolished in the United States when George was a few years old, but he continued to live on the farm. He loved gardening, and he even began experimenting with ways to improve the soil and keep crop-eating pests away. George left the farm when he was about 12 years old, but at that time it was impossible for an African-American student to enroll in a high school or college.

Peanut oil

Peanut flour

George created more than 300 different peanut products, such as flour, oil, plastics, and soap.