

Center for research

In 1948, Sabiha had the idea of setting up Albania's Museum of Natural Sciences. It is now named for her. It's not only a museum, but also a center for research into the variety of Albanian animals, including fish.

Act of bravery

It was a particularly dangerous time to be a scientist, because scientists are people who look for evidence and notice when lies are being told. Sabiha was horrified to hear that one of her old science teachers had been sentenced to death because he had opposed Enver's new rules. Sabiha had met Enver before, when they were in the same class at school, and she bravely arranged to meet him. Sabiha argued that what Enver was doing was wrong.

Not long afterward, Sabiha was arrested and accused of a crime she didn't commit. Tragically, Sabiha didn't get a chance to defend herself in court—she was one of a group of people killed without a trial.
