

Introducing “in” and “out”

Although this will become a favorite game when your baby is a little older, now is a good time to introduce the idea of in and out to her. Sit together with a basket containing a few of her favorite toys in front of you. Pull out each toy and say “Out!” When the basket is empty, reverse the process, saying “In!” as you put each toy back. Give her a chance to explore each toy as you go.

Take peekaboo to a new dimension

In addition to playing peekaboo by hiding your face behind your hands or a baby blanket, try partially hiding your baby's face under the blanket for a second or two. Then lift the material and exaggerate your surprised response as you say “Boo!” You may want to try the same approach with a favorite toy or larger stuffed animal: partially hide it under the baby blanket and then express surprise to see the toy peeking out. Point it out and say, “There's the toy!” Her love of repetition means this game can go on and on!
