

Roly-poly game

You'll notice your baby's head control is well-established, her neck and arm muscles are getting stronger, and she may be practicing the moves that help her to roll over. Lie her on her tummy on a rug and put a toy down just in front of her and slightly to one side. As she reaches for it, she may get closer to rolling over or surprise herself by actually doing it. Praise her if she does, since she may be a little surprised to find herself upside down. Gently guide her back onto her tummy and see if she wants to try the game again.

Try larger board books

Now that your baby's concentration skills are improving, look for some bigger board books with very colorful pictures and more detail to add new visual stimulation when you have story time together.
