

Start naming colors

Your baby's eyesight is developing, so start naming colors as you play. Make a simple tower with three or four colored blocks, naming each color as you pile them up. Then let her enjoy knocking them down with your help.

Have a change of Scene

A quick change of scene can help to alter the mood or break up a long day. Whether it's raining or not, take a short walk outside under an umbrella together. Or just walk to the street to watch people go by and wave to any familiar faces. If you have a local corner store and have run out of something, a quick trip there can give purpose to your excursion.
