

Enjoy some downtime together

Play some calming classical or instrumental music for a short while every day. Choose something restful and with a slower beat, such as slow jazz or a gentle piano or flute concerto. Or try meditative music like Celtic or Indian flute. Making this part of your routine—maybe after you have fed your baby—will give you both a chance to rest, avoid overstimulation, and enjoy being close as you listen to the music.

Bumping noses

Hold your baby in your arms. Whisper “Boo!” and move your head toward her. Say “Boo!” quietly and move your head even closer. Say “Boo!” a little louder (but don’t shout!) and bump noses gently. She should love watching your face up close and enjoy the fun tone in your voice.
