

Pelvic lifts with baby on board

If it's becoming harder to find time to tone up now that your baby is more active, try this exercise. She should enjoy lying on your lap and being lifted up and down as you tone your abdominal and leg muscles and improve the flexibility of your spine.

1

Lie on your back on a mat or nonslip surface with your knees bent and feet slightly apart. Sit your baby on your abdomen, let her rest against your thighs, and hold her around her arms or middle. As you exhale, lift your pelvis slightly off the floor, hold briefly, then inhale and lower. Repeat 10 times.

2

If you want to work harder, exhale and lift your pelvis right off the floor so your torso and thighs are in a straight line. Hold briefly, then inhale and lower your pelvis to the floor. Keep talking to your baby the whole time to engage her attention. Repeat as many times as you can.

