

Form an impromptu band

Get the family or some of your friends to join you in grabbing a range of instant instruments—a pan and spoon, a trumpet made of rolled-up paper, a whistle, and so on—and give your baby a rattle to hold. Give a performance of favorite songs, singing them in silly voices as you play your instruments, dancing around the living room, and trying to make him laugh.

Help your baby to improve his hand-eye coordination and concentration skills, and start to learn about cause and effect. Sit on the floor with him and build a small pile of plastic blocks or small boxes (variety pack cereal boxes work well) right next to him. Sit a small soft toy on top of the pile, watch him reach for the toy, and see if he can bring the pile crashing to the ground as he grabs it. Clap if he succeeds.
