

Start a news book

A notebook containing daily news about your baby is a wonderful way of keeping track of all the small but significant developments in her everyday life. It's also a lovely record to share at the end of the day with your partner if one or both of you have been out at work or away from your baby for any length of time. Describe any activities your little one has enjoyed or encountered for the first time and her reactions to different situations, objects, people, food, and so on.

You may also want to take pictures on your phone of any memorable outings, playdates, and milestones.
