

Mirror play

To improve your baby's observation skills, stand or sit in front of a mirror with him in your arms or on your lap. Make some different expressions and funny faces. He will enjoy looking at your reflection and his (though he won't recognize himself yet) and maybe try to copy your expressions. You can also hold a favorite toy up in front of the mirror; give it a silly voice, and pretend that it is talking to him while he interacts with its reflection.

Learning to reach

Sit your baby on the floor, put a toy down just out of his reach and watch him try to stretch for it. If he becomes frustrated because he can't grab it, encourage him gently. After a few tries he should learn how to lean forward to grasp the toy. This simple game is all part of encouraging him to start crawling.
