Introduce books with texture and noise

Choose a new board book with interactive elements to read to your baby. Name the textures and touch them, and name any noises as he explores the new book.

crackle!

Exaggerate your facial expressions

As you tell your baby a story or talk about something new you will do together, make your facial expressions noticeable. He'll be studying your face as he listens to you, and it helps him to see how you are reacting.

Starring role

Make a short video recording of your baby and play it back to him so he can watch himself. He'll be intrigued, though he won't recognize himself on screen yet.

Kiss chase

Your baby is old enough to be developing a sense of anticipation now. He will love it if you stretch out your hands, warn him that you are coming to catch him, then lift him into your arms and cover him in kisses until he giggles.
