

Squishy art play

Put a sheet of thick watercolor paper inside a sealable ziplock bag and drizzle a small amount of two water-based paint colors into the bag. Seal the bag properly and hand it to your baby. Show him how to press, squash, and crumple the bag, and talk about how squishy it feels and how the colors spread across the paper. When he has finished, you will have some original art to remove from the bag and allow to dry.

Play with finger people

Draw a small face on the pad of each of your fingers and thumbs with a pen. Make fists with your hands and pop up each finger in turn to say hello to your baby. Give each finger face a name and a funny voice. You can even use cotton balls as hair and fasten them in place with a dab of PVA glue.

Make up a short story about the finger characters and finish by waving both your hands at your baby and saying bye-bye.
