

First sensations

Gently stroke your baby's arms, hands, and feet in a soothing motion while she is nursing and she'll love the gentle touch of your fingers on her skin. Also try stroking a soft cotton ball on the backs of her hands and fingertips to give her a different sensation.

Spend time alone with your baby

As a parent, you need to spend some one-on-one time with your baby to establish a strong bond, understand her language, and feel involved in her care. There's no need to do anything complicated—spending time just looking at her, making eye contact, and talking to her is the best way for you to get to know each other.
