

Maraca music

Now that your baby is spending more time exploring objects with her hands, her hand movements are becoming more controlled. Make a couple of homemade maracas for her to shake around and make some noise. Use mini food containers with tight lids and locking hinges and half-fill them with dried rice, macaroni, or beans. Make sure the lids are firmly snapped shut, seal them with tape, and show her how to shake the containers to make music.

Banana talk

Your baby's babbling is developing all the time. Pick up a banana and tell her that you are going to pretend it is a telephone and call someone she knows well. Have a brief conversation into the banana and pass it to your baby to babble into. Then peel the banana and enjoy eating it together.
