

“Cooking” with flour

Spread some newspaper or a plastic tablecloth on the floor, sit your baby on it—or in her high chair—and put a little pile of flour in front of her. Show her how to move the flour around with her hands and make squiggles, and give her a measuring spoon or small plastic cup to scoop up and play with the flour. Sprinkle some flour on her hands or feet so she can explore the sensation of it on her skin.

Make a sensations rug

Try changing from touch and feel books by making a sensations rug. Firmly sew some large swatches of textured materials—fur, soft velvet, and shiny, bumpy, rough, and reflective materials—onto a clean piece of fabric. Encourage your baby to sit on the rug and feel the different textures against her skin as you describe them to her.
