

Develop your baby's taste buds

Take the opportunity to experiment with a greater range of flavors at mealtimes before your baby hits the stage when she wants to stick to the foods she knows she likes. Try switching between savory and sweet, and mild and sharp, foods to broaden her tastes: some grated cheese then mango, for example, or cottage cheese then banana bread, hard-boiled egg then apple, or sliced turkey then kiwi.

Sticky toys

Boost your baby's hand control by teaching her to grip and pull. Attach a strip of double-sided contact tape or strong sticking tape to a piece of cardboard or the side of a cupboard. Stick some soft toys onto the sticky strip and encourage your baby to try to pull them off (at this stage soft toys are safest and easiest for her to pull off).

