

Laundry in the fast lane

Rather than use your baby's precious nap time to get the laundry done, why not do it together? Although the work may take you longer, it will be more fun for you both and can help free up nap times for you to have some time for yourself.

❁ Position your laundry basket on the floor next to your baby. Sit her down inside the basket, lightly cover her with a clean dish towel, and pretend you can't find her; she'll giggle when you say, "Oh no, where is my baby?" Make her laugh again as you remove the dish towel and "discover" her.

❁ Then turn the laundry basket into a car and make the relevant noises as you gently zoom her around the room. Stop between each round of the racetrack to hang up or fold some laundry or unload the washing machine. Repeat the words "Pit stop!" each time you stop, and describe what you are doing; she'll soon anticipate this stop/start routine as part of the game.
