

Try these...

Beat to the rhythm

Tap out a single beat on an upturned saucepan either with your hand or a plastic or wooden spoon and see if your baby can copy you. Build up to making two or three beats.

Helping out

Your baby may be ready to act out familiar routines himself. Let him “change” his teddy by popping a disposable diaper onto the teddy so he can pull it off. Let him help you put toys back in the toy box, or give him a damp cloth to play by wiping a table.

Start a babysitting circle

Have child care you can trust without the expense by inviting some good friends to make up a group. Find a babysitting circle website online that makes it easy to send group emails and give each other babysitting “credits” to use.

Stacking rings

Help develop your baby’s hand-eye coordination by taking turns to slide a few large plastic toy rings, or baby-friendly rings of twisted rope, onto your arm—or put smaller curtain rings onto the handle of a wooden spoon.
