

Memory game

Place two colored blocks that are different shapes and sizes (make sure they look very different) in front of your baby.

Describe one block as you pick it up: “This is the big yellow block.” Then put it behind your back. Ask your baby where the block is. He may point and make sounds to show you he knows where it is. Repeat with the other block.

Color hunt

Tape four different colored squares (or paint them) onto a large piece of cardboard. Set the cardboard on the floor and walk around the house with your baby looking for different objects to match each colored square—a lemon for a yellow square and a blue sponge for a blue square, for example. Talk to your baby about what colors you are looking for as you search. Pile the objects on top of the matching color and name the color again as you do so. He can easily recognize different colors by now, although he won't be naming them himself for another two years or so.
