

Birthday celebration

It's nearly your baby's first birthday, so celebrate her journey by planning a party with all your relatives and friends, or with just a few special people depending on her personality and how social she is.

Don't forget it's your anniversary as parents too, and a cause for celebration. You may want to get a babysitter and go out another evening, or celebrate at home.

Hidden treasure

At the beach or in a sandbox, show your baby a brightly colored object and cover it with sand while she watches you. Ask her to find the object by helping her dig into the sand. Gradually you can start hiding the treasure when she's not looking; she will quickly build on her understanding of object permanence and how things disappear and reappear.
