

Colored foods

Arrange bite-sized pieces of different colored foods—such as red cherry tomatoes, blue blueberries, green avocado or cucumber, and yellow mango or banana—on a plate (bright and primary colors are easier for her to distinguish at this age than more subtle hues). Name the colors, then encourage her to eat up the pieces of food.

Feely bags

Use a cotton shoe or book bag as a feely bag and put some tactile objects inside it—perhaps a soft, furry toy, a hand-massage ball with rounded knobbles, a rattle, a wooden building block, and a scrunched up ball of newspaper. Show your baby how to put her hand inside the bag and feel for an object (you may have to help her find just one object to touch). She has the extra surprise of pulling the object out of the bag to discover what it is.
