

Give her time to develop her gaze

As you feed your baby or hold her in your arms, give her plenty of time to look up and study your face. Her focus is improving all the time, so you may find her gazing up at your hairline if you have dark hair, and her eyes may move around your face for some time.

Learn her language

Spend today learning what your baby is trying to tell you, and as you respond to her signals she'll learn that it's important to communicate. You'll know if she's content, but the pitch of her cry may mean she's hungry or wants to be held close, and she may rub her eyes if she's tired. If she frowns, yawns, or turns her head, she's had enough play.
