First smiles

Watch for your baby's first real smile this month. If you keep smiling at his face whenever you look at him, he will directly respond at some point by using his whole face, including his eyes, to smile back at you. If you reward his smile by smiling back enthusiastically, he's much more likely to do it again. Smiling is one of his earliest social exchanges; enjoy these first smiles as he learns how to show you he's happy and watches for your reaction.

Take a bath with your baby

Being snuggled against his parent's chest at bath time can make all the difference if your baby doesn't enjoy his own baby bath very much. Make sure the water is the right temperature for him before you get in together, and make lots of soothing noises as you bathe him and gently splash water over his tummy.
