

Mirror faces

MONTH
2

Lay your baby on his back on a soft blanket or rug and lie down on your back next to him so your heads are touching and you are both looking up. Hold up a large hand mirror so you can both look up into it. Make eye contact with him in the mirror, calling his name to catch his attention if necessary. Smile brightly at him in the mirror and watch his expression change. If he smiles back, give him lots of praise.

Try making other exaggerated facial expressions to see how he reacts—raise your eyebrows, or widen your eyes, for example. From birth, your baby loves looking at your face; this game helps him learn a different way of looking at you, and reinforces his recognition of facial features.
