

Try some “on” time

Your baby is still fascinated by looking at people's faces. Let her enjoy having some “on” time with someone else while you have some time “off.” Arrange for a partner, grandparent, or close friend to babysit for an hour while you stay close by and enjoy some hands-free time catching up on email or household management, or relax.

Repeat a simple story

Whether you make up your own simple story or read a story from a baby book, repeat it several times over so your baby can hear the same sounds over again. She will love the repetitious sounds you make, and may even try to imitate your speech by opening and closing her mouth as you talk.
