

Indoor sledding

Place a large piece of cardboard on a carpet or rug (checking first that there are no staples or other sharp objects in the cardboard). Lay your baby face down on the cardboard with her arms out in front of her or to her sides and move the cardboard gently side to side to give the sensation of sliding. She may lift her head for a few seconds if her neck muscles are getting stronger to see what is going on!

White noise

If your baby is overstimulated and finding it hard to go down for a nap, turn on the vacuum cleaner or washing machine and let the white noise from the machine help to lull her to sleep.
