

Butterfly kisses

Give your baby butterfly kisses on her cheeks when you have some calm cuddling time together. Bring your eyes up close to her cheek and flutter your lashes so they delicately stroke her skin. She will love the closeness of being with you, and be curious about the tickling sensations on her skin.

Up and away

Sit on the floor, knees bent, with your baby resting on her tummy against your shins. Hold her hands in yours, exhale, and use your abdominals to roll gently backward to lie on your back on the floor. Keep your knees bent the whole time. As you roll back, your knees will lift in the air, taking your baby with you so she rises up, still resting against your shins. Make lots of encouraging noises to keep her attention. If your abdominals are strong enough, roll back up after a short while, otherwise lift her off your shins and give her a hug.

