

Hand control

Your baby is fascinated by what she can do with her hands now: as her newborn grasping reflex fades, she can choose what she wants to grip onto. Hand her a baby book or toys with different textures to explore, or lower a toy on her baby gym so she can grab it.

Bond with Bach

Play some classical music and hold your baby as you move to the music. Turn the music down occasionally if you want to whisper words of love to her, then turn the music back up and continue to cuddle her or stroke her head and back. Listening to music like this may also encourage her brain development for math and spatial reasoning.
