Sensory adventure

If you or a grandparent has an outdoor clothesline—or space to attach a horizontal length of twine between two trees in the yard—hang up some soft towels and sheets, hold your baby in your arms, and carry him gently through the laundry. Allow a sheet or two to drape gently over his head and then “pop” out on the other side to create an element of surprise. Let him feel the soft material on his skin as you move along the clothesline, and talk about what you are doing as you walk along.
