

Make an energy-boosting smoothie

Your baby needs all your energy and attention, so if you find yourself flagging make yourself a nutrient-rich smoothie to boost your vitality. It's quick and easy to make, and can be adapted to suit your tastes. Use approximately 5 fl oz (150 ml) plain yogurt—or a nut milk such as almond milk, or rice or oat milk—as a basic ingredient. Include a few nuts or seeds (sunflower, sesame, and pumpkin work well) for essential fatty acids, toasted oat flakes if you want a more filling drink, and lemon or lime juice if you want a zing. Add fresh fruit and vegetables of your choice and purée in a food processor until the mixture is free of lumps. Add some apple juice if the smoothie is very thick.

Some good combinations include: equal quantities of orange and carrot juice with fresh mango and a little fresh ginger; one apple, ½ cucumber, and a small handful of fresh mint leaves; or ½ avocado, a small handful of watercress, a few fresh mint leaves, and 3½ fl oz (100 ml) apple juice.
