

Social baby

At this age your baby will enjoy seeing your friends almost as much as you do. So, while she is still very portable, arrange to meet some friends during the day and bring her along. You may want to make a lunch date with a couple of friends from work on their lunch break, or brunch with a group of old friends on the weekend, for example. Turn the get-together into a reason for an adventurous trip on the bus or train. And the more attention your baby receives from your friends, the better!

Playback

Your baby is using her voice—plus movements and expressions—to make herself understood. It's important to keep repeating the sounds she makes back to her to encourage her to listen and make more sounds, and explore using her voice. For a change, why not record her babblings and cooings on your smart phone or computer. You could try tickling her toes to make her giggle too. Then play the recording back to her several times, telling her that it is her who is talking.

