

Grab and scrunch

As she grows more confident grabbing and holding onto objects, your baby is ready to explore more unusual items that make a noise. Crumple up a large piece of brown or wax paper and pass it to her to grab and scrunch. She should be fascinated by the noises she makes as she wraps her fingers around the crinkly paper.

Go on a nature trail

Carry your baby around your yard or take her to a local woodland or park to introduce her to a wealth of new experiences, with all kinds of smells, sights, and sounds to take in. Talk about what you can see and hear as you walk; look up at a butterfly, get down low to study a snail, touch the delicate petals of a flower and a rough tree trunk, and smell pine cones and herbs.
