

089 Plant a Wild West garden

30
MINS

Saddle up and give a low container a touch of the Wild West, with prickly cacti and other desert plants. Because their stems store water, cacti can survive if you forget to water them.

What you need

- Container • Gravel
- Cactus compost
- Spoon • Trowel
- Tongs • Gloves
- Cacti • Sand • Water

1 Fill the bottom of the container with a thin layer of gravel. Add 1–2 in (2–5 cm) of compost. Dig holes for your cacti.

2 Wearing gloves, take a cactus from its pot. Use tongs to plant it. Push the soil down around it with a spoon.

3 Plant the other cacti the same way. Lightly water the soil with lukewarm water. Add model figures to create a scene.

Fill a jar lid with paper towels or cotton. Dampen it with water. Drop on cress seeds and tiny pieces of gravel. Put in a model animal figurine. Your “cress forest” will grow around it.
