MINS

Limbo began as a Caribbean dance contest. Today, it's a game of skill as players try to bend over backward while walking forward beneath a pole. How low can you go?

What you need

- 3 x 5 ft (1.5 m) poles
- Garden wire
- Wire cutters or scissors
- Friends
- Pencil or pen

1 Push two poles 6 in (15 cm) into the ground about 4 ft (1.2 m) apart. Mark a point 3 in (7 cm) from the top of each.

2 Wrap wire around the marks, leaving a length to twist into a hook. These will hold the limbo pole.

3 Mark more spaces evenly down the length of each upright pole and add wire hooks to them all. Now you can start the game, moving the limbo pole lower and lower until you find a winner. If you like, put on some Caribbean music to accompany the game.

Don't fall!

Fill plastic bottles with colored water. Decide how many points each color is worth. Set them up with the highest points at the back, toss rings over them, and tally your score.
