

Earth

Our home, planet Earth, is in a state of constant change. Rivers and glaciers sculpt Earth's landscape, while molten rock bubbles deep below the surface. Over millions and even billions of years, oceans open up and continents collide, shaping the surface of the Earth. Volcanoes erupt and die out, and mountains rise up and are eroded away.