

Effective images

We promise we'll never put down a healthy dog.

Please promise to help us with a gift in your Will.

Every year, Doge Post carries the annual 1000-Dogs contest. Of participating centers across the UK, the winner put down a 44lb dog. By having a gift of your 1000 prize list of Dogs, you can see and help us make the world a better place for them.

- When analyzing the layout of a piece, don't just identify the features—explain why they are effective.

Images can be used for effect or to give more information. For example, an advertisement for a hair product might show a picture of a model with extremely glossy hair to persuade the audience to buy a new shampoo. A newspaper report about a terrible flood might show a photograph of the affected area to demonstrate exactly what has happened. Graphs and diagrams are used to make complicated topics or statistics clear.

Category	Popularity (Relative)
Ghosts	High
UFOs	Medium-High
Zombies	Medium
Vampires	Low-Medium
Witches	Low

The most common supernatural sightings are of ghosts.

Photographs and diagrams are usually accompanied by a short sentence that explains what the image is about. This is called a caption.

Subheadings are used to break up a long text into shorter chunks, so that it's easier to read. They also summarize the content of the next paragraph, which helps the reader find the section they're interested in reading.

Newspaper and magazine articles often include quotes from eyewitnesses or experts. To draw attention to particularly interesting quotes, the words can be lifted out from the article and repeated elsewhere on the page, usually in bolder or larger type.

ZOMBIE WAS MOVIE EXTRA

Most of the sightings are easily and quickly explained. In 2011, a reported zombie sighting turned out to be a movie extra taking his lunch break. Another caller raised the alarm after seeing something suspicious floating in the air on a Saturday night: “I saw a big, orange, glowing sphere rising from the ground.” The sighting turned out to be a Chinese lantern.

"I saw a big, orange, glowing sphere rising from the ground."